

Argentina has reduced its energy subsidies in the first seven months of the year by $2.7 billion, Energy Secretary Eduardo Rodriguez Chirillo said on Thursday, as part of the government's ...

Presidential Spokesperson Manuel Adorni says that planned cuts to transport and public utility subsidies will kick in from the start of next year.

Argentina reduced its energy subsidies in the first seven months of the year by $2.7 billion, Energy Secretary Eduardo Rodriguez Chirillo said on Thursday, as part of a goal to curb the...

The first large-scale battery energy storage tender in Argentina is catching the attention of the international community as an unequivocal step towards modernizing power infrastructure.

*Argentina's government led by President Javier Milei has published a decree (465/2024) making changes to the country's energy subsidy scheme, stating this will move from a "generalised and ...

Argentina's government has advanced its targeted energy subsidy reform, shifting costs to consumers while tightening eligibility criteria into a neoliberal business model.

Argentina's government faces tough choices as it overhauls energy subsidies, aiming to support the most vulnerable while potentially burdening middle-income households. Amid rising costs ...

We extend the analysis in this direction with a conceptual framework and measurement for the electricity sector. Results indicate that omitting subsidies' financing biases the belief about their redistributive ...

Argentina's new government will cut energy subsidies and devalue the peso by 50% in a bid to deal with a massive fiscal deficit. The government will also cancel tenders for public works, the...

Energy subsidies will be reduced to a third during 2024, an amount equivalent to 0.7% of GDP, some U$2,5 billion. The government seeks to eliminate all of them in the next 3 years.

Web: <https://idsolar.co.za>