

#FreetownTheTreeTown is Freetown's leading climate adaptation initiative, focused on restoring green spaces, tackling climate challenges, and creating sustainable jobs.

In Sierra Leone, Freetown and the Western Area Peninsula have been losing 550 hectares of forested land per year since 2011. Rapid deforestation exposes Freetown's 1.2 million residents to increased ...

"Transform Freetown is ambitious, but its participatory, interdisciplinary and multi-stakeholder nature promises to contribute to a more liveable and productive city.

This article further explains some significant approaches for developing a successful and sustainable waste management strategy and for promoting value for waste.

The analysis was developed in collaboration with C40 and the City of Freetown. We used the Sustainable Asset Valuation (SAVi) methodology to assess the economic, social, and environmental ...

Freetown has undergone rapid population growth and recurrent disasters, both contributing to the loss of millions of trees and exposure of the City population to the effects of ...

This article further explains some significant approaches for developing a successful and sustainable waste management strategy and for ...

This qualitative study examined the causes, patterns, and forms of FLW disposal in Freetown, Sierra Leone, and its environmental implications. Methods: Twenty-one semi-structured ...

Such a business-as-usual attitude and reckless environmental stewardship must change if Freetown is to remain a viable community, with people living and working sustainably alongside the ...

The #TreeTown achievements highlight the crucial role of community participation and support, as well as the strategic application of cutting-edge technologies, in fostering sustainable ...

To address these challenges Freetown's City Council has launched a climate action strategy to strengthen resilience and reduce carbon emissions, building on such initiatives as the ...

Web: <https://idsolar.co.za>